Health Benefits of Tomatoes and Lycopene

Lycopene, a carotenoid without provitamin-A activity, is present in many fruits and vegetables. It is a red, fat-soluble pigment found in certain plants and microorganisms, where it serves as an accessory light-gathering pigment and protects these organisms against the toxic effects of oxygen and light.

Tomato products, including ketchup, tomato juice, and pizza sauce, are the richest sources of lycopene in the U.S. diet, accounting for greater than 80 percent of the total lycopene intake of Americans. Processed tomatoes (e.g. canned tomatoes, tomato sauce, ketchup) contain more lycopene than tomatoes because cooking breaks down cell walls, releasing and concentrating carotenoids.

As a powerful anti-oxidant, lycopene helps neutralize harmful free radicals, which are implicated in cancer, heart disease, macular degeneration and other age related illnesses.
